The Stutzman Improved Fruit Evaporators

Are for Sale and on Exhibition at the Storerooms of the

C. W. GIBSON COMPANY,

108, 110 and 112 North Main Street, Los Angeles, Cal.

And orchardists and farmers especially are invited to examine the machines and get Catalogues and prices. The Stutzman Evaporator is made of galvanized iron and hence is fire-proof. The Trays are wire gauze. There is nothing shoddy in its construction. It is more easily moved about than any other Evaporator in the market. This alone is of great advantage to the fruit dryer. In simplicity of construction and durability it excels, and in cheapness nothing of the kind can compete with it. Made in all sizes, from stove to large factory. jun26

AMERICAN FRUIT EVAPORATOR!

The most practical and reliable Fruit Evaporator made. It gives unobstructed hot air currents ABOVE and BELOW all fruit, thus insuring evenness of drying and no spoiled fruit. Beware of infringements. THE AMERICAN is pre-eminently the fruit-raisers' machine. Its sizes grade from domestic to manufacturing wants. It makes the highest quality of work with ordinary care in handling. There is no need of making anything else. Though we approve a slight use of sulphur, the AMERICAN is specially adapted for higher grade unbleached work. It places fresh cut fruit first in highest and dryest heat; cures cut surfaces at once and keeps them dry, thereby setting and making permanent the color, and also thereby, as in broiling steaks, securing the best quality in product. We place our experience in evaporating at the disposal of our customers. In some cases of gratuitous service is of more value than prices paid us for evaporators. Sold by

Throat Diseases, Bronchitis, Asthma AND CONSUMPTION,

Together with the Eye, Ear and Heart; Also all Chronic Diseases, and Particularly Those Incident to Females, Successfully Treated by

N. HILTON WILLIAMS, M. D

Graduate of Victoria College, Toronto, Ontario; Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario; for three years Assistant Physician of the Chicago and Gloucester Throat and Lung Institution; for fifteen years, and still, proprietor of the Detroit Throat and Lung Institute, also Licentiate Physician in and for the State of Michigan, and for several years Proprietor of the Ontario Pulmonary Institute and Health Resort at Toronto, Ontario. Over 20,000 cases treated by us during the past nineteen years.

In order to show how successfully lung diseases can be cured when properly treated, we give the testimonial of one who is well and favorably known by many of the people of Los Angeles. From Rev. L. R. Fiske, D. D., President Albion College, Albion, Mich., formerly pastor of Central M. E. Church, Detroit, Mich., and editor of the Christian Advocate:

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 22, 1877.

DR. WILLIAMS—Dear Sir: I am glad to add my testimony to the efficacy of the treatment my son has received. In the Spring of 1877, my son, then at the age of 23, was suffering from a severe attack of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs, so as to be compelled to keep his room, and for most of the time his bed. Within the space of two weeks he experienced alarming hemorrhages from which the ordinary remedies failed to afford him temporal relief. I applied to you who step-ped him with the healing medicines, which effected an immediate arrest of the bleeding, and which has never returned, since he began the inhalation.

Respectfully,

L. R. FISKE.

DISEASES OF THE RECTUM

Female and Chronic Diseases a Specialty.

Rectal Ulcers, Hemorrhoids or Piles Fissures, Fistula in Ano, Pruritus or so-called Itching Piles, Polypus Recti Successfully Treated by Dr. A. W. Brinkerhoff's System of Rectal Treatment.

PAINLESS AND FAIRLESS SYSTEM FOR A the cure of Hemorrhoids without cutting, ligating, burning, baking medicines or dieting first. Number of operations, 20,000. Over 50,000 operations for piles and not one death. The knife, ligature, screwed, hot iron and the cruel carbolic treatment are the purposes in use to-day for the treatment of Piles.

We can treat you without using any of these barbarian and shameful acts in every case.

Thousands die annually from what is called CONSUMPTION, heart, liver, kidney diseases, etc., while the cause is unknown, hidden, never brought to light. We ask the sick and suffering to investigate the cause of the same back, affected kidneys, vaginal, womb, urinary, heart, lung, stomach, liver and head troubles; rheumatism, benumbed limbs and bloated abdomen, dyspepsia, biliousness and tendency to malaria, and they will find RECTAL ULCERATION the hidden monster—the foe to human health and happiness.

The existence of Rectal Ulcers is as old as the race, and surgeons from time to time have written of them, but have been unable to SEE THEM. We have instruments by which the rectum can be clearly and intelligently examined, and without pain or danger to the patient. The invention of these instruments by Dr. A. W. BRINKERHOFF, of Upper Sandusky, Ohio, has opened wide the door to the successful treatment of this malady, and has established the fact, after examining more than twenty thousand patients suffering with all the various complaints found in chronic diseases of both sexes, that Rectal Ulceration existed in every case. With our system of treatment we cure the ulceration, if not too far advanced, and all the train of symptoms and misery disappear.

Come and investigate! Our practice is not experimental, our labor not guess work. We know what we see. Charges reasonable.

GEN. GRANT IS DEAD!

The Grand Old Hero's Sufferings Ended at Last.

A NATION'S GREAT LOSS.

Last Sad Scenes at Mount McGregor—The Group About the Death-Bed.

A FEW MOMENTS OF SUSPENSE

Then He Passed Away with a Deep Breath, Like One Relieved from Long and Anxious Tension.

Associated Press Dispatches to The Times.

MOUNT MCGREGOR, July 23.—A few minutes before 8 o'clock Doctors Douglas, Shrady and Sands stood on the cottage veranda conversing on the condition of General Grant and discussing the probabilities of his death and the limit of life left the sick man. Mrs. Sartoris and Stenographer Dawson were conversing at a little distance away, when Henry, the nurse, stepped hastily upon the piazza and spoke quietly to the physicians. He told them he thought the General was very near to death. The medical men hastily entered the room and approached the bedside. Instantly upon scanning the patient's face, Dr. Douglas ordered that the family be summoned to the bedside. Haste was made, and Mrs. Grant, Mr. Jesse Grant and wife, U. S. Grant, Jr., and wife and Mrs. Colonel Grant were quickly beside the doctors at the sick man's cot. Mrs. Sartoris and Mr. Dawson had followed the doctors in from the piazza, and the entire family was present, except Colonel Grant. A hasty summons was sent for him, but he entered the sick room while the messenger was searching for him.

ABOUT THE DEATH-BED.

The Colonel seated himself at the head of the bed, with his left arm resting on the pillow above the head of General Grant, who was breathing rapidly and with slightly gasping respirations. Mrs. Grant, calm, but with intense agitation bravely suppressed, took a seat close by the bedside. She leaned slightly upon the cot, resting upon her right elbow, and gazed with tear-blinded eyes into the General's face. She found there, however, no token of recognition from the sick man, who was peacefully and painlessly passing into another life. Mrs. Sartoris came behind her mother, and leaning over her shoulder, so witnessed the close of a life in which she had constituted a strong element of pride. Directly behind Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Sartoris, and a little distance removed, stood Drs. Douglas, Shrady and Sands, spectators of the closing of the life their efforts and counsel had so prolonged.

THE LAST SYMPTOMS.

The doctors had noticed, on entering the room and proceeding to the bedside, that already the purplish tinge which is one of nature's signals of final dissolution had settled beneath the finger nails. The hand that Dr. Douglas lifted was fast growing colder than it had been through the night. The pulse had fluttered beyond a point where the physician could distinguish it from the pulse-beats in his own finger-tips. Respiration was very rapid, and was a succession of shallow, panting inhalations. As the respirations grew quicker as the close, they also became less labored and almost noiseless.

At times a passionate longing to prevent the event so near would rise within Mrs. Grant, who pressed both his hands, and leaning forward tenderly kissed the face of the sinking man. On the opposite side of the bed from his mother, and directly before her, stood Jesse Grant and U. S. Grant, Jr., and near the corner of the cot on the same side as Jesse, and near to each, was Mr. N. E. Dawson, the General's stenographer and confidential secretary. At the foot of the bed and gazing directly down into the General's face was Mrs. Colonel Fred. Grant, Mrs. U. S. Grant, Jr., and Mrs. Jesse Grant, while somewhat removed from the family circle, Henry, the nurse, and Harrison Tyrnell, the General's body-servant, were watching the closing life of their patient master.

Dr. Newman had repaired to the hotel for breakfast and was not present. The General's little grandchildren, U. S. Grant, Jr., and Nellie, were sleeping in the nursery room above. Otherwise the entire family and household were gathered at the bedside of the dying man.

NOT A MOMENT TOO SOON.

The members of the group had been summoned not a moment sooner than was prudent.

Colonel Fred Grant sat silently, but with evident feeling, though his bearing was that of a soldierly son at the death-bed of a hero father. U. S. Grant, Jr., was deeply moved. Jesse bore the scene steadily, and the ladies, while watching with wet cheeks, were silent.

The morning had passed to five minutes beyond 8 o'clock, and there was not one of the strained and waiting watchers but who could mark the nearness of this lifetime to its final ebbing. Dr. Douglas noted the nearness of the supreme moment, and quietly approached the bedside and bent above it, and while he did so the sorrow of the gray-haired physician seemed closely allied with that of the family. Dr. Shrady also drew near.

THE CLOSING MOMENTS.

It was seven minutes after eight o'clock, and the eyes of the General were closing. His breathing grew more hushed as the last functions of the heart and lungs were hastened to the closing of the ex-President's life. The peaceful expression seemed to be deepening in the firm and strong-lined face. A minute more passed and was closing as the General drew a deeper breath. There was an exhalation like that of one relieved of a long and anxious tension. The members of the group were impelled each a step nearer the bed, and each wanted to note the next respiration, but it did not come then; it never came.

There was absolute stillness in the room and no sound broke the silence save the singing of birds in the pines outside the cottage and the measured throbbing of the engine that all night had waited by the mountain depot.

"IT IS ALL OVER."

quietly spoke Dr. Douglas, and there came then heavily to each witness the realization that General Grant was dead.

Then the doctors withdrew, the nurse closed the eyelids and composed the dead General's head, after which each one of the family group pressed to the bedside one after the other and touched their lips upon the quiet face so lately stilled.

Dr. Shrady passed out upon the piazza, and as he did so he met Dr. Newman, hastening up stairs. "He is dead," remarked Dr. Shrady, quietly.

The fact of having been absent from the dying man and his family at the last was the cause of sorrow and regret to the clergyman, who had waited all night at the cottage. He had been summoned a moment too late and reached the cottage only in time to minister to the family sorrowing, and gaze upon the scarcely hushed lips of the dead general, to whom Dr. Newman's love had bound him in such close ties.

DISCUSSING HIS LAST HOURS.

Soon after Doctors Douglas and Shrady left the death-bed they conversed feelingly of the latter hours of General Grant's life. The pulse had first indicated failure; the intellect was the last to succumb with its clearness and conscious lucidity, and that, after midnight last night, though a circumstance at 3 o'clock indicated cognizance: "Do you want anything, father?" questioned Colonel Fred, at that hour. "Water," whispered the General, huskily, but when offered water and milk they gargled in his throat and were ejected, and that word of response was the last utterance of General Grant. Dr. Douglas remarked that the peculiarity of General Grant's death was explained by the remarkable vitality that seemed to present an obstacle to the approach of death. It was a gradual passing away of the vital forces, and a reflex consciousness, the Doctor thought, was retained to the last. The General died of exhaustion and in a perfectly painless, sinking away.

HIS LAST DAYS PAINLESS.

"Yes," interjected Dr. Shrady, quietly, "the General dreaded pain when he felt that he had begun sinking, and he asked that he should not be permitted to suffer. That promise was made, and it has been kept. Since he commenced to sink Tuesday night, he has been free from pain. Toward the last no food was taken, but when a wet cloth was pressed to his lips he would suck from it water to moisten his mouth." During the General's last night, Dr. Shrady was constantly within call. Dr. Douglas was all night at the cottage, and Dr. Sands slept at the hotel after midnight. Within twenty minutes after the death of General Grant, Kere Gerhardt, a Hartford sculptor, who had been making a study here of the General, was summoned to the cottage at the suggestion of Dr. Newman, to make a plaster mask of the dead man's face. He was highly successful.

Within half an hour after the General's decease a waiting engine at the Mountain Depot was on its way to Saratoga to bring an undertaker, who will place the remains on ice to-day, to await the arrival of a New York undertaker who has been summoned.

THE SAD NEWS

Borne to the Country and the World.

DEMONSTRATIONS OF SORROW FROM ALL

Bells Tolled and Houses Draped—Proclamation by the President—Tributes Commanded from the Army and Navy.

Associated Press Dispatches to The Times.

NEW YORK, July 23—6:30 a. m.—The news of General Grant's death had been received but a few moments before the bells upon Trinity and St. John's churches began to toll, and in a few moments the solemn tones were caught up in all parts of the city and conveyed the news of the General's death to the people of this city and Brooklyn.

PROCLAMATION FROM GOVERNOR HILL.

Governor Hill has issued a proclamation in view of the death of General Grant, in which he directs that flags on all public buildings of the State be placed at half-mast until his burial, and on that day, yet to be appointed, all ordinary business in the executive chamber and departments of State government be suspended. The people of the State are called upon to display, until the funeral, emblems of mourning, and it is requested that at that hour they will cease from their business and pay respect to the distinguished dead.

STOCK EXCHANGES TO CLOSE.

NEW YORK, July 23.—The Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange has just resolved to close the Exchange on the day of General Grant's funeral.

IN CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, July 23.—The Board of Trade unanimously voted to adjourn at 12 o'clock to-day as a mark of respect to the memory of General Grant.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 23.—The Produce Board adjourned at noon as a mark of respect to the memory of General Grant.

IN CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, July 23.—The bells of the Fire Department began tolling all over the city a few minutes after the receipt of the news of General Grant's death. Flags are displayed at half mast on all the government buildings.

IN GALENA.

GALENA, Ill., July 23.—The announcement of the death of General Grant was received in Galena, his old home, from whence he went to the war, with most profound sorrow. On receipt of the news the church bells tolled. On the various home and all public buildings the flags were flying at half-mast, and public buildings, churches, business houses and private residences were draped in emblems of mourning. General W. R. Rowley, the only surviving member of the old commander's staff, and now the only survivor of the great military family circle, and whose wife died but a few weeks ago, is prostrated with grief. Business in the city is practically suspended. Mayor Barrett has called a meeting of the City Council to make arrangements for proper memorial services, to take place at the time of the funeral.

IN DENVER.

DENVER, Col., July 23.—The city is draped in mourning and steps have already been taken looking to a proper observance of the funeral. Reports from the interior of the State are to the effect that people everywhere profoundly feel the national loss. Ex-Senator Chaffee, father of Mrs. U. S. Grant, jr., left for New York this evening.

IN LOUISIANA.

BATON ROUGE, La., July 23.—Immediately on receipt of the news of the death of Grant, Governor McEnery issued a proclamation ordering flags placed at half-mast and the State capitol draped in mourning.

IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Tolling Bells Tell the Story—Actions of Public Bodies.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—Arrangements had been made that, as soon as news of the death of General Grant was received here, it should be immediately communicated to the city fire alarm department, which would announce the fact to the inhabitants of the city by tolling the bells. This was done as announced. Within a few minutes of the receipt of the first bulletin announcing the death, the fire-alarm bell had tolled out sixty-four times, being once for every year of the old hero's life. Minute guns were fired from all of the Government forts, and flags were raised to half-mast on all public buildings, as also on all private dwellings whose owners opened a flag. Expressions of sympathy for Mrs. Grant, in her great affliction, are heard on all sides. Large-sized lithographs of the General are meeting with a great sale.

RECOGNITION FROM PUBLIC BODIES.

The Chamber of Commerce, Manufacturers' Association, Board of Trade and Produce Exchange held a meeting at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce to discuss what action should be taken to show proper marks of respect to the memory of General Grant. A committee of fifteen was appointed, to act in conjunction with the Board of Supervisors' committee. The committee is composed of the presidents and vice-presidents of the several associations, with three other members from each. It was decided to await news from the East, to see what action would be taken there. A resolution was adopted that all business on the day of the funeral be suspended.

PRODUCE EXCHANGE.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—The Produce Exchange adjourned over to-day as a mark of respect to General Grant.

G. A. R.

Department Commander Wardell, of the G. A. R., has issued a general order that the flags of the several posts shall be draped in mourning for thirty days, out of respect to the memory of Grant.

A meeting of members of the Grand Army of the Republic was called this morning to take action for the arrangement of appropriate ceremonies in this city as a token of respect to General Grant. A committee of three was appointed to confer with the Mayor and Board of Supervisors; and another meeting will be held this evening. It was decided to suggest that Governor Stoneman be requested to make the day of the funeral a legal holiday.

IN WASHINGTON.

Reception of the News—Official Orders—Proclamation by the President.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Shortly after eight o'clock this morning the President was informed of the death of General Grant. He immediately directed that the flag on the White House be placed at half-mast. The lowering of the flag was the first intimation that the citizens of Washington had of the death, although they had been anticipating it throughout the night. A few minutes after the White House flag had been placed at half-mast, flags on all of the public buildings, and on many private ones, were placed in like position. The bells of the city were tolled, and citizens who heard them readily recognized their meaning. Business men immediately began draping their houses with mourning and residences were draped in a similar manner.

THE CABINET MEETING.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—A meeting of the Cabinet has been called for 11 o'clock, instead of 12, the usual hour, to take action on the death of ex-President Grant.

TO CLOSE THE DEPARTMENTS.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The President has issued an order directing that all Executive Departments of the Government be closed at 1 o'clock this afternoon, as a mark of respect to the memory of General Grant.

AN ORDER TO THE NAVY.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Secretary Whitney has issued an order directing the several ensigns at each naval station, of each vessel of the United States navy in commission, be hoisted at half-mast, and guns be fired at intervals of every half hour from sunrise to sunset on the day of the funeral. The day is to be thus observed where this order may be received in time; otherwise, on the day after its reception. Officers of the navy and marine corps will wear the usual badge of mourning attached to the sword belt and on the left arm, for the period of thirty days.

THE CABINET MEETING.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—With the exception of Secretary Endicott, all members of the Cabinet were present at the meeting to-day. The President informed them of General Grant's death, he having been officially informed of the demise by a telegram from Colonel Fred. Grant. President Cleveland has instructed Adjutant-General Drum to go to New York to represent him, and to consult with Mrs. Grant relative to the funeral of the ex-President.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S PROCLAMATION.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The following proclamation was issued by the President: The President of the United States has just received the sad tidings of the death of that illustrious citizen and ex-President of the United States, General Ulysses S. Grant, at Mount McGregor in the State of New York, to which place he had lately been removed in the endeavor to prolong his life. In making this announcement to the people of the United States the President is impressed with the magnitude of the public loss of a great military leader, who was in the hour of victory magnanimous, and amid disaster serene and self-sustained; who in every station, whether as a soldier or as a Chief Magistrate, twice called to power by his fellow-countrymen; trod unswervingly the pathway of duty, undeterred by doubt, single-minded and straightforward. The entire country has witnessed with deep emotion his prolonged and patient struggle with a painful disease and has watched by his couch of suffering with fearful sympathy. The destined end has come at last, and his spirit has returned to the Creator who sent it forth. The great heart of the nation that followed him in life with love and pride, bows now in sorrow above him dead, tenderly mindful of his virtues, his great military services and of the glory he has added by his death. In testimony of respect to the memory of General Grant, it is ordered that the Executive Mansion and the several departments in Washington be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days, and that all public business be suspended on the day of the funeral. The Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy will cause orders to be issued for appropriate military and naval honors to be rendered on that day.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed, at the city of Washington, this

FRIDAY, JULY 24, 1885.

Ulysses S. Grant.

With bated breath and with millions of loyal hearts throbbing as one in their sympathy for the great, heroic, silent sufferer, the nation has watched and waited through these last days for every word that should reach it from the chamber of the dauntless, yet dying, hero. Through all the long and painful struggle with his insidious disease, General Grant was not deceived. He knew what the end would be. But with a courage and determination characteristic of himself, an unyielding fortitude that gave to him the mastery of himself while standing face to face with the inevitable which was so near, he worked calmly, patiently and unfalteringly to finish the task which he had set himself to do. The world never witnessed a more pathetic spectacle than that of the great General whose invincible courage, calm foresight and matchless military skill had led our armies on to victory, financially overwhelmed himself at last—by no fault of his own, but through the criminal treachery of one whom he had trusted—stricken by mortal disease, yet bravely, uncomplainingly and steadfastly from day to day toiling through the long and painful hours silent and uncomplaining to the end. .

The nation's heart was touched by this as it could have been in no other way. It took a new measure of its hero. It read the man as it had never read him before. It went back with an added feeling of tenderness and of reverence to the battlefields of Shiloh, Fort Henry, Fort Donelson and Big Black, to The Wilderness, Cold Harbor and Petersburg, to Richmond and to Appomattox, which shed their splendid and undying lustre upon the arms of the Republic and the name of Grant, the victorious General. It pondered anew the debt of gratitude that not only the nation itself wed, but which freedom through all coming ages will owe to the conquering leader of our loyal armies.

But while the Nation's heart was stirred by these memories, the feeling grew to be almost universal that in the splendor of those achievements the grandeur of the man was not more fully unfolded and understood than in the darker and later hours when he, though fully conscious of the swift, inexorable ebbing of his life's tide, left no duty undone, enduring without a murmur his burden of suffering, and with a calmness that was without fear awaited the end.

But still again, and yet again we turn backward to the hour of our nation's peril, when defeat and disaster attended our arms in the East; when the confidence of loyal hearts had begun to falter, and men were almost ready to despair, when the command of all our armies was given to the silent soldier whose signal successes in the West had already given him national renown. It was at the very consummation of that struggle when the responsibility of command was assumed by Grant. On that great theater of action, where the war surged around the Nation's capital, disaster had followed disaster; defeat had succeeded defeat. No plan was successful. The anxious, careworn face of our great-hearted President became seamed more deeply, from day to day, with its pathetic lines of sorrowful anxiety as the ranks of the Union soldiers were thinned and no decided advantage to our arms was achieved.

Then came the great leader for whom the nation had unknowingly waited. With a foresight remarkable for its clearness and wisdom he planned his campaigns. With characteristic self-reliance and determination he arranged his plans. In the face of opposition, jealousy and disapproval he adhered to them and won. He was the nation's military head, and his courage, his self-reliance and his sagacity were commensurate with his devotion to the country's cause. There were no more drawn battles; no more uncertain victories or defeats. A new era had commenced. The man for the hour had arrived. He built on no man's foundation. He carved his own way to success. With a steady and immovable determination he adhered to his own plans in spite of all hindrances, marked out the great campaigns of the war; directed, guided and controlled the vast armies of the Republic until the rebellion was crushed and the Union restored.

Remembering the magnanimity shown by the great commander to his fallen foe at Appomattox in his terms of surrender—terms so honorable and humane that they touched to the quick the hearts of all appreciative Southern soldiers—the South, too, will deeply mourn our common country's great loss. Over the open grave of General Grant, the first soldier of the Republic, and twice its President, the once divided, discordant, belligerent sections may mourn sincerely and with mutual sorrow.

And as the years go by, and party and sectional animosities are forgotten, the greatness of his deeds will be the pride of the whole country and the whole people, for these immortal deeds will shed a growing luster upon the history of this Republic. He will be remembered as one of the greatest military leaders of modern times—renowned not alone for his marvelous military success and skill, but for the beautiful simplicity of his character, his magnanimity as a conqueror, his unswerving devotion to his country, and his uncomplaining, patient endurance.

Noble soldier! Matchless leader! Patient sufferer, pass on! The gates have swung open wide for thee! Immortality is before thee, while behind these Freedom shall keep thy imperishable deeds crowned with the bay and laurel of unfading memory.

The Custody of the Grant Valuables.

In another part of the TIMES we print a list of General Grant's trophies which were turned over to the United States Government by Mrs. Grant, under an arrangement made with Vandorbilt, with which the public is already familiar. Now that these valuables are in possession of the Government there will be a large demand for their exhibition at the earliest moment practicable. We indorse the suggestion of a correspondent who asks: "Why not have a room set apart for the collection in the National Museum immediately, the presumption being that the articles will be exhibited in that establishment in accordance with the law establishing the Smithsonian Institution— that * * all objects of art and of foreign and curious research belonging or hereafter to belong to the United States which may be in the city of Washington, in whose soever custody they may be, shall be delivered to such persons as may be authorized by the Board of Regents (of the Smithsonian Institution) to receive them, and shall be arranged in such order and so classed as best to facilitate the examination and study of them in the building * * to be erected for the institution," &c. Professor Baird is the Curator of the National Museum as well as Director (or Secretary) of the Smithsonian Institution, and it is to be presumed that he would do everything in his power to make the exhibition of the Grant relics as attractive as possible. Of course, greater facilities than the Museum now possesses would be required to insure the safety of the articles; but Congress would doubtless gladly vote the appropriation necessary for fire and burglar-proof cases for this interesting and valuable exhibit.

Grant & Ward.

Behind the deadly disease to which General Grant finally succumbed was another enemy hardly less terrible. That enemy was the perfidy of man. The fact that the General's financial troubles, brought upon him by the dishonesty and treachery of others, had much to do with bringing him down to the grave, is now admitted. General Badeau, in a recent interview upon the causes of the General's prostration, said: "I consider Ferdinand Ward morally responsible for this. He is a murderer. Had he not trapped the General into his financial speculations, and thus brought upon his old shoulders the only sorrow and shame of his life, he would be as well as I am to-day. The local trouble would have been held in abeyance for years yet. This is the saddest chapter in the sad history of the firm of Grant & Ward."

An intimate friend of the Grant family who was a constant visitor at the house for years, said, in talking of the same topic: "General Grant's weakness and inability to stand the present attack undoubtedly came from the shock which the humiliating failure of Grant & Ward caused him. He is not a demonstrative man, and at the time did not show the grief and worry which it caused him. In this respect he is like Horace Greeley. The secret grief has borne him down. Shortly after the failure he told General Frye that he had not slept for a month, and I myself have seen him sitting in his parlor with his head sunk on his breast, a picture of despondency and despair."

First in the Nation's Heart.

In the affections of his countrymen General Grant has occupied the first place since the beginning of his fatal illness. At times the attention of the people has been temporarily attracted from the sick man's bed by the exciting events transpiring in the old world, but when the news of a relapse came, how quickly was all else forgotten and the name of Grant replaced at the headings of the telegraphic columns of every paper in the country, so giving sure proof that he was the idol of his country! When General Grant's condition was so critical last Spring, the Boston Herald indicated this sentiment by relating a trifling incident:

It was painful yesterday when Grant's life was hanging by a thread to see what the fire alarm from box 52 caused. Rough, plain men, pretty much such men as Grant himself was, not so many years ago, started out of shops and basements and engine rooms. "Is Grant dead?" was the question. No. It was only a fire alarm. Let it burn. What cared they? If Grant could have known how many men were waiting, some with tears in their eyes, to see whether the bells were tolling for him, the abuse under which he suffered for so many years would all have been forgotten.

The Blue, the Gray, and Grant.

BY T. C. HARBAUGH.

They sat together side by side
In the shade of an orange tree,
One had followed the flag of Grant,
The other had fought with Lee.

The boy in blue had an empty sleeve,
A crutch had the boy in gray;
They talked of the long and dreary march,
They talked of the bloody fray.

"My chief is dead," the Johnny said,
"A leader brave was he;
And shouldest thou've at Lexington
Doth hang the sword of Lee."

"My leader lives"—the boy in blue
Spoke low and with a sigh—
"But all the country waits in fear
That he to-day may die."

"God bless our Grant!" the veteran said,
And dropped a tear, and then
In heartfelt tones the answer came,
"For the rebel said—"Amen!"

Incidents in the Life of General Grant.

CHARACTER SKETCHES,

Graphically Illustrating the Life and Work of the Union's Greatest Son.

TRIBUTES FROM MANY PENS.

How He Entered the Army—His Simplicity, Purity and Strength of Character—Anecdotes.

An elaborate and comprehensive sketch of General Grant, his military and civil career, his life and employments since retiring from public office, and his sickness and sufferings, was printed in the TIMES a short while since, upon one of the occasions when his malady had assumed an unusually dangerous phase. With the great military and civic events in General Grant's noble life the American people are closely familiar, and we therefore, upon the sad occasion of his death, give some attention to other and less familiar phases of his grand character, which are set out graphically in the series of timely sketches printed below, embracing anecdotes, reminiscences, personal recollections and personal tributes—a series of wide scope and great variety, and coming from a score of pens, all possessing interest at this time.

Beneath the Flag.

Our country's hero lies beneath her flag to-day.
Come ye who wore the blue, and ye who wore the gray,
With arms reversed, with cadenced step, take final march
With him, who led beneath the great triumphal arch
The victors, when earth's greatest, grandest war was o'er,
When victory had crowned the flag our fathers bore.

II.

A nation weeps to-day beside a nation's chief,
The world is here, to join and share its bitter grief;
And Liberty, a mourner, walks beside his bier,
And with her gallant sons, shall pay her tribute tear
To him, her loyal, able, faithful, noble son,
Who filled in war, in peace, the place of Washington.

III.

Fair Freedom's sons shall follow in the steps of Grant,
And high her beautiful, her starry banner plant,
Among the flags that lead the nations of the earth;
The peer of any in its symbolism, its worth;
A flag that's honored as it flies half-mast to-day,
And as it folds around our hero chieftain's clay.

Farewell!

(To the dead of Mt. McGregor, July 23, 1885.)

Farewell, thou noble heart!
Weep, Nation thou bereft
Of him whose loyal part
Shall not by time be cleft
From the world's history!

Farewell, O soul serene!
First thee in azure space,
Systems and spheres between,
"Till in God's chosen place
Soived is His mystery!

HIS LAST LOOK.

General Grant's Last View of West Point.

General Grant looked upon West Point for the last time when en route to Mount McGregor a month ago. He nudged the doctor as the swiftly moving train unfolded the beauty of West Point, to "look." The old Commander's mind was thrilled with happy thoughts of his boyhood days on the Hudson. Hon. Thomas L. Hamer sent him there in 1839. Graduating in 1843, young Grant served in Missouri until he went to Texas in 1845. He was under fire in the battles of Palo Alto, Resaca de la Palma, Monterey, Vera Cruz, Molino del Rey, Chapultepec and at the capture of the City of Mexico. Returning from Mexico he was stationed at Detroit, Sackett's Harbor, and in California and Oregon until 1854, from which time until 1861 he was in civil life. Coming back to the profession of arms, he seized Paducah and Smithland, had a horse shot under him at Belmont, captured Fort Henry and Fort Donelson, was slightly wounded and narrowly escaped defeat at Pittsburgh Landing, conducted the siege of Corinth and commanded at Iuka, Raymond, Jackson, Champion's Hill and Big Black, and on the Fourth of July, 1863, took the "Gibraltar of the Mississippi," Vicksburg, with about 27,000 prisoners. From thence he went to command at Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mountain. Having been called to the command of all the armies of the Union, Grant assumed direct control of the Army of the Potomac, conducting affairs elsewhere by telegraph, and participating in person in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, before the absolutely impregnable rifle pits of Cold Harbor, and in the bloody contests about Petersburg, closing an unbroken successful military career at the surrender of Lee at Appomattox.

Says the Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch: "Elected President twice, received with distinguished honor by all the leading nations of the world, placed on the retired list of the army in old age, and on full pay as a General, and then en route to a final outlook upon the scenes of this earth from Mt. McGregor, he nudges Dr. Douglas with boyish pride, as they approach West Point, and tells him to 'Look!' Forty years of the most eventful history of this country after the Revolution is covered between the flight at Palo Alto and the General's eye ing look at West Point. Among all the Generals he stands highest. Success settles honor in war. His triumphs in peace are hardly less than those of war. Conquering all prejudices, passing through trials in politics and finance seldom, if ever, surpassed, and passing away with the respect and good will of all, what more can be said of his invaluable service to his country and mankind?"

STORIES OF GRANT.

Anecdotes which Illustrate His Characteristic Traits.

Many stories are told of Grant's boyhood, illustrative of the characteristics which he afterward exhibited. His father at one time had seen a horse which he wished to purchase, but could not agree with the owner about the price. Finally he concluded he must have it, and sent Ulysses after it with instructions to offer fifty dollars for it, and if the man would not take that sum, offer him fifty-five and at last sixty. With these instructions the boy departed on his mission. On telling the owner of the horse his errand, the man asked him how much his father said he would give for the horse. The lad frankly told his instructions. The owner chuckled at the greenness of the boy, and, of course, told him very emphatically that he could not have the horse for one cent less than sixty dollars. He had reckoned on the simplicity of the unsophisticated diplomstist a little too much, for the latter replied that, though his father had instructed him respecting the price as he had told him, yet he, himself, had made up his mind, on seeing the horse, that he was not worth over fifty, and would give but that amount. The astonished owner seeing that the boy had made up his mind and was going away without the horse, actually sold it to him for fifty dollars.

HIS SELF-RELIANCE AS A BOY.

The father gives the following anecdote that illustrates strikingly not only the boy's ability, but the father's confidence in it, to take care of himself whenbut twelve years old. He says:

"[It was necessary for me to have a deposition taken, to be used in a lawsuit in which I was engaged. I had written more than once about it to my lawyers, but could not get the business done. 'I can do it,' said Ulysses. So I sent him on the errand alone. Before he started I gave him an open letter that he might show the captain of the boat, or anyone else, if he should have occasion, stating that he was my son and was going down to Louisville on my business. 'Going down he happened to meet a neighbor with whom he was acquainted, so he had no occasion to use the letter. But when he came on board a boat to return, the captain asked him who he was. He told him, but the captain answered, 'I cannot take you, you may be running away.' Ulysses then produced my letter, which put everything right, and the captain not only treated him with great kindness, but took so much interest in him as to invite him to go as far as Maysville with him, where he had relatives living, free of expense. He brought back the deposition with him, and that enabled me to succeed in making a satisfactory adjustment of my suit."

It would seem very extraordinary to send a lad only twelve years of age on such business at all, but to send him to another State, to find his way by railroad and steamboat, as best he could, would be foolhardiness under any circumstances, except that the boy had previously shown himself to be an uncommon child.

HIS PHRENOLOGICAL "BUMPS."

Again the father says: "I will relate another circumstance which I have never mentioned before, which you may use as you think proper. He was always regarded as extremely apt in figures. When he was ten years old a distinguished phrenologist came along and stayed several days in the place. He was frequently asked to examine heads blindfolded. Among others, Ulysses was placed in the chair. The phrenologist felt his head for several minutes without saying anything. At length a noted doctor asked him if the boy had a capacity for mathematics. The phrenologist, after some further examination, said: "You need not be surprised if you see this boy fill the Presidential chair."

AN EARLY EVIDENCE OF OBSTINATE DETERMINATION.

In those early days he exhibited another trait, which shone out most conspicuously in his public career as a general, viz: The apparent unconsciousness that he was unable to do anything he once set about. To begin a thing with him makes sure the end. He exhibited this trait at Shiloh, and though terribly beaten the first day, he intended, even if Buell had not arrived, to fight the victorious army the next. Nothing but his total destruction would secure his defeat. This peculiarity was exhibited in early life. His father sent him one day with a team of two horses to bring back some pieces of timber, supposing there were men at work there, who would help him load. But, on his arrival, they were gone. The natural, natural one would have been to return and report the state of the case. But having been sent for the timber, it never occurred to him that he was to go away up town. So after contemplating the job for awhile, he set about accomplishing it. A half fallen tree lay near, making an inclined plane. Up this he succeeded in rolling the heavy sticks, leaving the ends projecting over. Backing his team up under these, he fastened them with a chain to the wagon, and so hauled them on it, one by one, and returned home with his load.

NOT MORE THAN 10,000 TO CARRY OVER.

After the battle of Shiloh and even up to the present day, there was a good deal of discussion as to whether Grant was justified in selecting his position with the river in the rear. It is reported that Grant was asked the question, what would he have done had he been forced to cross the stream, replied:

"Why, would have used the gunboats."

"But," continued his questioner, "the gun boats could have carried over only 10,000 men at most."

"Well," said Grant, "there would not have been more than 10,000 men to carry over."

"UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER" GRANT.

General Grant has had a great many nicknames applied to him, both during and since the war. One of the earliest, after he had became known to the country, was that of "Unconditional Surrender" Grant. It arose in this way: After the attack upon Fort Donelson, General Buckner wrote to General Grant proposing an armistice in order to agree upon the terms of capitulation. He received the following characteristic reply: "Yours of this date, proposing an armistice and appointment of commissioners to settle terms of capitulation, is just received. No terms other than an unconditional and immediate surrender can be accepted. I propose to move immediately upon your works."

The "unconditional surrender" at once followed."

HIS HAPPY DAYS WHEN HAULING WOOD.

The following anecdote illustrates Grant's mode of life after he resigned from the army in 1854, and resided on a farm near St Louis. It is related by one familiar with it. The writer says:

"It is well known that when he resided in Missouri he was very poor, and lived in a small, uncomfortable house, cultivating a farm of a few acres. His chief income was derived by hauling wood to the city of St. Louis. He used to supply Hon. Henry T. Blow, of that city, with his fuel. Mr. Blow was elected to the Thirty ninth Congress, and on one occasion went with his wife to one of General Grant's popular receptions. Mrs. Blow wondered if General Grant would recognize her as an old friend or acquaintance under the different circumstances of their relative positions in life. Well, Mrs. Blow had not been long at the General's before he came to her and said, "Mrs. Blow, I remember you well. What great changes have taken place since last we met!' 'Yes, General,' said Mrs. B., 'the war is over.' 'I do not mean that,' he replied, 'I mean with myself. Do you recollect when I used to supply your husband with wood, and pile it myself, and measure it too, and go to his office for my pay?' 'Oh, yes, General, your face was familiar in those days.' 'Mrs. Blow, those were happy days; for I was doing the best I could to support my family.'

GRANT WAS HENRY AND LINCOLN WRONG.

The country was roused to a high pitch of enthusiasm by the news of Grant's operations about Vicksburg, the occupation of Jackson, Miss., and then the capture of Vicksburg. When the news of the surrender reached President Lincoln officially, he wrote the following autograph letter to Grant:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, }
Washington, July 13, 1863. }

*To Major-General Grant—*MY DEAR GENERAL: I do not remember that you and I ever met personally. I write this now as a grateful acknowledgment for the almost inestimable service you have done the country. I wish to say a word further. When you first reached the vicinity of Vicksburg, I thought you should do what you finally did—march the troops across the neck, run the batteries with the transports, and thus go below; and I never had any faith, except a general hope that you knew better than I, that the Yazoo pass expedition, and the like could succeed. When you got below and took Fort Gibson, Grand Gulf, and vicinity, I thought you should go down the river and join General Banks, and when you turned northward, east of the Big Black, I feared it was a mistake. I now wish to make a personal acknowledgment that you were right and I was wrong.

Yours, very truly, A. LINCOLN.

GRANT AS A WEST POINT CADET.

Henry Coppee, Esq., who was with Grant at West Point for two years, gives the following account of him while there:

"I remember him as a plain, commonsense, straightforward youth, quiet, rather of the old-fashioned-young-scholders order; shunning notoriety; quite contented, while others were grumbling; taking to his military duties in a very business-like manner; not a prominent man in the corps, but respected by all, and very popular with his friends. His sobriquet of Uncle Sam was given to him there, where every good fellow has a nickname, from these very qualities; indeed, he was a very uncle-like sort of a youth. He was then and always an excellent horseman, and his picture rises before me as I write, in the old, long, single-breasted cadet leather gig-top, loose riding pantaloons, with spurs buckled over them, going with his clanking saber to the drill hall. He exhibited but little enthusiasm in anything; his best standing was in the mathematical branches, and their application to tactics and military engineering.

"If we again dwell upon the fact that no one, even of his most intimate friends, dreamed of a great future for him, it is to add that, looking back now, we must confess that the possession of many excellent qualities, and the entire absence of all low and mean ones, establish a logical sequence from first to last, and illustrated, in a novel manner, the poet's fancy about

"The best laid schemes of the giant mice
Of things to come at large."

HIS SIMPLICITY OF DRESS.

The plainness of dress of both Lincoln and Grant harmonized. In February, 1865, when Grant came to Washington he called at the Capitol and paid his respects to the Senate in session. That body was so scandalized by the carelessness of his attire, that after he had gone one of the Senators actually arose and asked the consideration of the Senate on the matter.

"It is evident," said the fine-spun Senator, "that a gross mistake has been made in appointing Grant Lieutenant-General. I tell you, there isn't a second lieutenant of the home guard in my State that does not cut a bigger swell than that man who has just left our presence."

CUMSTONE CRAYONS.

A Volley of Anecdotes About the Blessed Dead.

From the Chicago Inter-Ocean.]

"Everybody is telling stories about Grant," said an old man to me on Friday, "but in some way they have failed to bring out just right one very important trait of character. There never was anything very picturesque about the old man, but he always surprised the boys on the home stretch. He could not be pumped or save himself, and I believe if the boys had one grievance against General Grant which they cling to it is that he never made good use of his opportunities.

***

"I remember when he rode along the lines at Shiloh with Buell and Nelson and the others on the second day of the battle that he failed to come up to the expectations of the men in the way of taking his proper place. Looking at the men on the slopping up below one would naturally have supposed that Buell, stately and brusque, or Nelson, pompous and full of the war spirit, was the leader, and that the watchful, quiet, modest Grant was the subordinate.

***

"Of course this impression was dispelled the moment Grant spoke, but he did not seem to know how to make a good impression. He was certainly disinclined to try. When he began his speech, making in 1880 I did think he would make more effort to make a good impression, but he didn't. At the great Warren meeting in Ohio he was on the platform with Conkling and other splendid political speakers, but when he rose to speak the crowd went off its feet in a storm of continuous cheers. Conkling would not have spoken one word until the storm had been quieted, but when Grant saw that the cheering was likely to continue he proceeded to make his speech, and he made it and concluded before the crowd had done cheering over his appearance."

***

"It was the same way at the dinner that evening at General Garfield's. Grant, of course, was the distinguished guest. He came to that table with a prestige that threw every other man in the shade; but he allowed Conkling and others to do the talking, and he sat reserved and quiet, not because he had nothing to say, but because he knew that it was all-important that Conkling and Garfield should do the talking. I remember that one of his long-time friends who sat opposite to him at the table said in a burst of indignation after dinner, 'I was so mad at the old man that I hoped at one time that the chicken salad would choke him.' But at that dinner Grant did what he always did—the right thing at the right time."

***

"When Grant was in Chicago three or four years ago," said an army official, "he lounged about Sheridan's headquarters a good deal. His son Fred was at that time on Sheridan's staff, but was absent one day, and Grant took his place at Fred's desk and looked after his business. A nervous, fidgety, irritable old fellow came in to inquire for some paper that he had left with Fred. When he stated his case Gra t took up the matter in a sympathetic way, and proceeded after the manner of an overanxious clerk to look the paper up."

***

"The document could not be found, and Grant, apologizing, walked with the old gentleman to the door. As I walked down the stairs with the mollified visitor he turned and asked, 'Who is that old codger? He is the politest clerk I ever saw at military headquarters. I hope Sheridan will keep him.' I answered quietly, 'That is General Grant.' The fidgety old gentleman, after staring at me for a full minute, said with considerable fervor, 'I will give you fifty cents if you will kick me downstairs.'

***

"It was always so with Grant, but the people understood him as well as they understand him now. In 1865 crowds gathered by the 50,000 to look at him, or shake hands with him. He seemed to shrink away from them, to be pained by the attentions that were paid him, but the people liked him better for it. When he made the tour with President Johnson and Cabinet he kept in the background, was the last man to come on the platform, and generally took a rear seat, but the people always found him and always called him to the front."

***

"That," said a man with snow-white hair, "is Grant's strong point. He always has come when the people called him—always came whether it suited him to come or not. He never rode at the front like a conqueror, but he always conquered. He never pleaded with men to do their duty, but they always did it. However he began he always satisfied the soldiers, and when he went abroad and when he came home he so completely met the expectations of the people that not even his enemies have cared to find fault with anything he has done since that time."

GOT A CIGAR FROM GRANT.

The Adventure of Two Washington Urchins.

General Grant, when President, used to walk out every evening for a smoke. Just at dusk he would come out of the north gate of the White House alone, with a cigar in his mouth, his head bent down just a little, and his left hand behind him holding a cane. That was his favorite attitude, and the striking figure was familiar to everybody. The hackmen on the streets would take off their hats as he went by and he always returned their salutes. He would walk down past the Treasury Department, down Fifteenth to the avenue; thence past Willard's, past the National Theater and up Thirteenth towards New York avenue. All the newsboys, bootblacks and street arabs generally, knew him and would follow him in his walk, waiting for him to throw his cigar stumps away. There was always a scramble after his stumps, either because they were better than those ordinarily found or because he had smoked them, and there was some dignity attached to smoking after him. The urchin who got the stump would put it between his lips and stand with his back up against the door post of the National "peanut gallery," with his thumbs in the armholes of his vest and puff away with a dignity that was the envy of all his admiring associates. One day the General turned to two little urchins who had been following him very assiduously for several squares, watching his cigar very eagerly, and asked them what he could do for them.

"Pleash, mishter," one of them replied, smacking his ragged cap off and holding it with both hands in front of him, while his companion got close behind; "pleash, mishter, we only wants a smoke what the President hash had."

The General smiled good humoredly, and taking an expensive cigar from his pocket—the only one he had left—he cut it in two and gave each of them that they were commanders of divisions or of armies. The boys thought they ought to be kicked for not putting on more style. They thought he was not proud enough of either his army or what it was doing.

***

"It was always this way. When he took command of the armies in the West he went slipping into Chattanooga as quietly as though he had been under

PERSONALS.

L. J. Rose is a passenger on this noon's train from the North.

L. E. Mosher and family have pitched their tent at Santa Monica.

J. B. Boal and Mrs. J. M. Boal returned from Long Beach yesterday.

Judge Brunson returned yesterday from his San Jacinto hunting expedition.

Miss Aggie, daughter of Sheriff Paul, of Tucson, has come to attend the Normal School here.

M. W. Howeth, wife and daughter, of Gainesville, Florida, are registered at the Depot Hotel.

Superior Judge Gibson, of San Bernardino county, is tenting with his family at Santa Monica.

In consequence of the serious illness of Mrs. Huckins, Dr. Huckins will be absent from his office and will not attend to professional calls until further notice.

Mr. N. P. Austin and wife, of Santa Barbara, now visiting friends in Vermont, will sail from Boston, for Europe, on the 15th of August, to be gone from one to three years.

County Surveyor E. T. Wright, who has been detained at Santa Barbara for some time under circumstances which he could not control—principally rheumatism—has returned to his native heath. He was on the streets yesterday, looking as though entirely restored to health.

General Manuel Elias Sanches and family, of Guatemala, stopped at the Depot Hotel for dinner yesterday, on their way north. General Sanches was obliged to flee to this country on the death of Barrios, but is now on his way home again under promise of safety.

At the Pico: N. B. Turk, Terre Haute, Indiana; Julian Rethonhouse, Rockford; M. W. Manning and wife, Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Tom Chubbuck, Deming; A. A. P. Carlisle, Las Vegas; W. P. Johnson, El Paso; John S. Wainright, St. Joseph, Missouri; Louis J. Lockwood, Lomaville; W. S. Scoville and family, Frederick City; J. McGuire, Tucson.

Arrivals at the St. Elmo: B. Moore, San Francisco; N. S. Jones, San Diego; M. H. Heyman San Francisco; Chas. Baker, Edward Baker, Yuma; Mrs. H. Stewart and niece, San Bernardino; H. J. Hewitt and wife, San Jacinto; Wm. H. Tait, Chicago; J. H. Moreland, New York; Benj. H. Cowes, San Francisco.

At the St. Charles: O W. Baldwin, Miss Fiance Baldwin, Oilwas; Mrs. G. E. Howard, R. L. Hice, Needles; J. H. Barnwell, Atlanta; H. C. Waterman, Orange; W. S. Wilson, Riverside; Charles Gere, Oakland; O. J. Meads, Fresno; Andrew McFarland, Compton; J. J. West, Alosta; F. G. Forsyth and lady, Michigan; M. D. L. Graham, Sacramento.

Cable Road Cars.

Three cars, with attached dummies, for the Second street cable road, have arrived from the north. They were built by A. F. Knorp, San Francisco, and are very attractive. The cars look much like ordinary street cars, while the dummies are open, with outward-facing seats along the sides and at the ends, and the gripsman's box in the middle. They are finished in oiled woods, alternate dark and light.

At 12:30 this morning a horrible growling and shrieking was heard on North Main street. It was the cable-cars being yanked by horse-power from the Naud warehouse "Y" up along the street-car track, no transfer wagons being wide enough to accommodate them. The cars were taken to Second street, and to-day will be dragged over and stored in the company's new engine house, now nearly completed. Three carloads of the ponderous machinery for the engine house arrived from San Francisco yesterday.

Highland Park.

The Highland Park tract is coming into great prominence now that the railroad is rapidly being constructed. There is a chance at present to secure these beautiful lots at one-third the price they will bring six months from now. For health, pleasant surroundings, good water and the advantages of the country with convenient access to the city, Highland Park is unsurpassed. There are no city taxes. Rent & Rowan are agents, Nadeau block. Call and see them before all the lots are taken.

Los Angeles Talent Abroad.

On Tuesday, the 28th inst., Miss Lydia Bell and Miss Bertie Bush, two of our talented artistes, are to give a vocal art entertainment in Lesch's Opera House at San Diego. Miss Bell will give dramatic readings and Miss Bush will give a number of fine vocal selections. The people of San Diego may expect a delightful entertainment which will no doubt be liberally patronized.

The Great Sale.

The auction sale at the Diamond House will be resumed to-morrow evening. Catalogues will be ready to-day, and goods can be examined after 10 a. m.

IN MOURNING.

How the News of Grant's Death Was Received Here.

THE CITY DRAPED AND SORROWFUL.

Tolling Bells, Flags at Half-mast and Streamers of Crape the Expressions of Universal Feeling—Preparations for Appropriate Memorial Services.

The dispatches which flashed over the wires Wednesday night brought conviction to every heart that the life on whose pulses a Nation's suspense has hung for painful months was to end in a few hours. It was generally expected that the hour of death would come with the break of day; but it was not until 7:30 a. m. that the long-looked-for, but unwelcome message, "Grant is dead," came. Ten minutes later the flag over the TIMES office was flying at half-mast—the first intimation to the general public of the news. At 8:30 a TIMES extra was being eagerly snatched upon the streets, conveying the announcement of the great General's passing away. As the news became of general knowledge, nothing else was spoken of, and the expression of grief was universal. The bells of the Fire Department and of the Fort-street M. E. Church were tolled long and solemnly.

THE CITY'S GARB OF MOURNING.

Flags were soon flying at half-mast from the following buildings: Turnverein Hall, City Hall, Hollenbeck block, Nadeau block, United States Hotel, Smith's Hotel, St. Charles Hotel, St. Elmo Hotel, Western Hotel, Los Angeles Furniture Company, Arcadia block, Eagle Corps armory, Baker block, Thirty-Eighths' engine house, Grand Central Hotel, Rose block, Plaza Hotel, Johnson Mansion, Highland Hall, Central schoolhouse, S. P. R. R. freight office, depot and high staff at repair shops, residence of L. E. Mosher, Southern Hotel, Los Angeles County bank, Grand Opera House, City of Paris, Vigilance Hook and Ladder house, Lichtenberger block, Ulich's restaurant, Commercial Hotel, Cercle Francaise Hall, and on the high staff on the Grand Army lot in Evergreen cemetery. A 40-foot staff was also made yesterday and will be erected on the County Courthouse to-day. The following buildings were draped before evening, some elaborately: G. A. R. headquarters, TIMES office, Confidence engine house, police office, St. Charles, St. Elmo, Grand Central, United States and Natick hotels, Eagle Corps armory, County Courthouse, Pythian Castle, Nadeau's city building, stores and offices of B. F. Coulter, J. T. Sheward, J. M. Hale & Co., W. C. Furrey, Abernethy & Co., Morford & Son, O. G. Tellis, H. C. Weiner, Los Angeles National Bank, E. C. Guirado, H. Siegel, City Attorney, C. Ducommun, Farmers and Merchants' Bank, Palace of Fashion, Albert Bowen, Penet & Orr, McIlratney & Howry, J. C. Bright, Diamond House, A. Feasley, Germain Fruit Company, Warner Bros. & Crosby, Downey block, Pickitt & Kelley, Wells, Vandyke & Lee, Jafsacre Art Depot, C. H. Bush, C. Laux, Jacoby Bros., James Hammell, County Assessor, City of Paris, Fred'k Linde, California Auction Store, H. B. Fox, Burch & Boal, Mrs. Forster, Los Angeles Oil Burning and Supply Company, Mosgrove & Co., J. Birnbaum, Chas. Charnock, Dr. J. P. Widney, Evening Express, Vigilance Hook and Ladder house, Thirty-Eights' house, Confidence engine house, Raphael & Schlesinger, County Board of Education, Dillon & Kennedy, Sud-California Post, Hill Bros., San Francisco Restaurant, Union Insurance Company, Los Angeles Furniture Company, Hellman, Haas & Co., Manning & Offut, M. W. Childs, Lacy & Vreeland, Hancock & Co., L. Mesmer, McDonald block, Koster's bakery, Templeton's stable, Columbia market, C. F. Potter, C. C. C. grocery, U. A. M. Hall, Peoples' store, Eckert's restaurant, Encampment Club rooms, Los Angeles County Bank, First National Bank and others, besides a number of residences. To-day no doubt will see a large increase in the number of buildings draped in the tokens of mourning.

The police force are all wearing their stars in crape.

Our colored citizens meet this evening in Judge Brunson's courtroom, to take appropriate action upon the death of the man who was Lincoln's right arm in the deliverance of their race.

PARAGRAPHS FOR APPROPRIATE SENTIMENT.

It is eminently fit that in the expression of a nation's grief for her foremost son, the Grand Army of the Republic should take the lead. The people have lost a hero and a leader, but the boys who wore the blue have lost, besides, a comrade. Throughout the country they are preparing to pay the last sad, loving tributes to their dead commander.

Directly upon the receipt here of the sad news, the commanders of the two Grand Army Posts of this city met and appointed a joint committee of the G. A. R., consisting of J. M. Guinn, G. H. Bonebrake and A. M. Thornton, of Stanton Post, and L. S. Butler, L. H. Marshall and John Robards, of Fisk Bartlett Post, to take action looking toward the holding of appropriate exercises. This committee met at the Sheriff's office at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and organized by electing J. M. Guinn as Chairman and L. S. Butler as Secretary. G. Wiley Wells, of Stanton Post No. 58, G. A. R., was invited to deliver the oration, and Governor Bonebrake, of Fisk Bartlett Post No. 6, G. A. R., was invited to act as President of the day. Major Horace Bell was appointed Grand Marshal of the day. An invitation was extended to all the civic and military organizations of the city to take part in the exercises of the day. Adjourned to meet subject to call.

Nothing more definite could then be done, and now the committee awaits telegraphic orders from the Grand Commander of the G. A. R for instructions as to date, etc. These orders will appoint services by the Grand Army throughout the country, on the day which shall be set for the burial of General Grant. At the next meeting of each Post, also, an order will be issued, under which each comrade will wear his G. A. R. badge in crape for 30 days.

There will probably be full burial services by the Grand Army, with procession, catafalque, etc., as was done when Garfield was buried.

Council will hold a special session to-day.

Justice Ranney's and the Mayor's courts held no session yesterday, and Justice Austin's adjourned at 2 p. m. The other courts are in vacation. The Produce Exchange also adjourned without a session.

West Los Angles Improvement Association.

The society turned out in good numbers at the Rosedale Schoolhouse night before last. Some $425 has already been subscribed to aid the new bus line for the first three months. The association has extended an invitation to all of the ladies of the neighborhood to become members, and help out the men o folks in the good work of adding to the natural advantages of West Los Angeles. The ladies know just what a place for homes should be, and it is expected that they will make the move continue on from time to time with renewed vigor. And thus you see the new society progresses in the right direction. The next meeting is called for Wednesday, July 29th, at the University.

Child Drowned at San Gabriel.

Yesterday a Spanish woman at San Gabriel went out to a zanja to get a bucket of water and was horrified to find that her little child had crept into the water and drowned. The little one had left its mother when she was not looking, and, probably attracted by the running water, fell in and was drowned.

The Band of Hope.

The recent concert given by the Band of Hope netted over $80, and was a complete success in every respect. The leader of the Los Angeles Band is doing splendid work for the children.

BRIEFS.

The Santa Rosa sails north to-day, and the Los Angeles to-morrow.

The typos are rolling up a big boom for their picnic at the City Gardens.

No deaths in the city yesterday, and none reported from the country.

S. J. Mathes went East yesterday morning, with a party of twenty-three.

Baron Roquiat has received the first "bus" tricycle (for two riders) in this city.

Two miles of steel rails arrived for the S. G. V. R. R. Wednesday. Work goes on rapidly.

Fourteen more carloads of ties for the A. & P. extension have been forwarded to Waterman.

The prizes to be awarded at the Printers' picnic, Sunday, are exhibited in the show-case at Preuss & Piconi's drug store.

C. C. Lambert was yesterday licensed to link his fate with Amelia Hadleys; and E. T. Taylor received similar permission as to Sallie F. Lord.

Twenty-three deeds, eleven mortgages, five releases, two miscellaneous papers, and two marriage licenses were filed with the County Recorder yesterday.

The certificate of incorporation of the Mechanical and Industrial Institute of Southern California has been received from Secretary of State Thompson.

The handsome Bernero block, east side of Los Angeles street, between Requena and First, is outwardly finished, and is an ornament to that part of the city.

The wood wagons now "keep in de middle ob de road" on Los Angeles street, close to First, instead of blockading approach to the sidewalks in that vicinity.

The TIMES extra, yesterday morning, was upon the street fifty minutes after receipt of the dispatch announcing Grant's death, and three hours ahead of any other paper.

Ah Hing, a Celestial, held for an assault at San Fernando, was taken before Judge Cheney yesterday on a writ of habeas corpus, and dismissed. The writ was found worthless.

The trial of Eugene Day, charged with maliciously libelling the Strasburg Hotel, occupied the greater part of the time in Justice Austin's court yesterday. After hearing argument the Court continued the case until Saturday.

District-Attorney Holton had the misfortune to be stung on the back of his right hand by a sting-ray while bathing on Duffy's beach, near Wilmington, a few days ago. The hand has been considerably swollen and has proven a troublesome member, but it is now improving.

Sheriff Meade, of Fresno county, has come after Walter Staniford, arrested by Captain Darcy for grand larceny up above. It is stated that Staniford, who is a brother-in-law of O. White of this city, hired a team at Fresno, rode it off, and sold it for $80, skipping with the proceeds. He passed some time at Bakersfield and Mojave, then coming here. Sheriff Meade will take him north to-day.

Santa Ana Valley.

Standard, July 18.]

Railroad business has been picking up since July 1st. So has business in town.

Mr. Frank Riverin has sold his grapes from seven acres of vineyard to McPherson Bros. The grapes were sold on the vines at $18 per ton. There will probably be 75 tons, which would make the very comfortable sum of $1350. This is at the rate of nearly $200 per acre. Let the croakers sneer at this, though a fact which cannot be gainsaid. There are a great many vineyards which yield $200 to the acre, and that without the trouble of gathering the product.

Mrs. T. N. Wells and Mrs. Wm. Eisendorf, of the Santa Ana valley, have now a large number of silk worms, have labored diligently to rear them and are enthusiastic in the business, believing that this section is peculiarly adapted to the successful raising of cocoons. The latter lady has persevered under many discouragements, and has now made a good success. A jar of her cocoons were sent to the New Orleans Exposition and attracted much attention. There seems to be no doubt but what this section can be made a silk-producing region, all the conditions being favorable.

On Saturday an election was held to vote for or against the levying of a tax to raise the sum of $500, with which to buy a bell, build a tower and pay necessary expenses of maintaining a fire department. Considerable interest was manifested, and 104 votes were polled. The vote stood 51 for and 53 against the tax. The opponents of the tax worked hard to defeat it, and have the "satisfaction" of knowing that after Monday the fire boys will disband.

The Sierra Madre.

Arizona Paper.]

Mr. William Jennings is preparing for a prospecting tour in the Sierra Madre. He prospected and mined in that country for twenty-five years, and there lost a fortune. He thinks it has no equal under the sun. Of course the country he has reference to is the Sierra Madre proper, and not the north and foothills that are ravaged by the Apaches. The main range is inhabited by two semi-civilized and friendly tribes, numbering about 80,000 souls, and no Apache dare show himself in that vicinity. The tribes referred to are the implacable enemies of the murderous Apache, and the government would do well to employ these Indians to hunt down the renegades now on the warpath.

R. J. Pennell Acquitted.

A private dispatch received in this city yesterday from Santa Barbara announced the acquittal of R. J. Pennell, who was charged with fraud by certain parties in Santa Barbara, in connection with the Edwards Oil burner. His trial lasted five days, and the jury brought in a verdict of acquittal five minutes after leaving their box. Mr. Pennell was ably defended by Mr. W. T. Williams.
